Supply and demand scenarios for South Africa's maize market: A reflection on the 2015/16 and 2016/17 marketing year

In 2014, South Africa's exported 2.1 million tons of maize which translated to R6.5 billion in export revenue (ITC, 2015). However, South Africa will not achieve comparable export revenues in the 2014/15 production year due to unfavourable weather conditions. In fact, South Africa will, for the first time in seven years, be a net importer of maize. Grain SA estimates this season's imports at 770 00 tons, compared to 83 073 tons the previous season. The high level of imports in the current marketing year will cost ±R2.2 billion. At the time of writing, 62% of the 770 000 ton requirement had already been imported. In this article, we briefly explore Grain SA's scenarios for the 2016/17 marketing year. Read more

Technology that improves weather and crop performance measuring ZoneScan and CropScan are weather and crop performance measuring technology that provides innovative solutions for better farming practices. ZoneScan tracks the whole of South Africa and all key production areas providing weekly data and imagery tracking rainfall, soil moisture, temperature and health and vigour (NDVI) in key crop production areas. To quantify what you see on ZoneScan on a per field/district/municipality per week basis the CropScan platform was developed. This is an advanced data platform that enables users to see data around production risk not previously possible. Click on the links for more information ZoneScan and CropScan.

Absa Agricultural Outlook 2016 - Agriculture remains profitable

It is the right time to continue investing in agriculture, according to the latest Absa Agricultural Outlook report for 2016. Speaking at the launch of this report, on 17 November 2015, Mr Ernst Janovsky, Head of the Centre of Excellence, Absa AgriBusiness said agriculture remains profitable despite lower commodity prices. This is mainly the result of improved productivity over the past decade, due to the adoption of new technologies.

South Africa has, however, experienced a dry spell over the past three years, which has put the profitability of the industry under pressure and has led to a slowdown in the growth of property values. However, the agricultural sector is the only sector that was able to grow over the past decade and continues to attract investments. It is expected to continue to yield good returns and therefore it is the right time to continue investing in spite of the droughts. Click to download the presentation done at the launch. A digital copy of the Absa Agricultural Outlook 2016 will be made available on AgriConnect's website during this week on <http://agriconnect.co.za>

NAMC/DAFF: South African Food Cost Review

The South African Food Cost Review attempts to provide more insight into the complex factors driving commodity and food prices. This is the seventh edition of the South African Food Cost Review, emanating from the recommendations by the Food Pricing Monitoring Committee in 2003 to monitor food prices in South Africa on a regular basis. The purpose of this publication is to reflect on food price trends during 2014.

According to the review the average world food inflation fell from 7.5% in 2013 to 5.2% in 2014. This is the lowest rate in the last four years. Global annual inflation decreased over the past four years (2011 to 2014), with the exception of Latin America and the Caribbean, where the annual food inflation rate reached 9.7% in 2014. The most remarkable decrease in the last four years has been recorded in Africa, 6.3% in 2014 compared to 12.8% in 2011.

Mohair - Highest price level ever

The national mohair market indicator attained its highest price level ever at an average of R224.61/kg this week in Port Elizabeth, says Pierre van der Vyver, Manager: Mohair for Cape Mohair & Wool (CMW), the largest mohair broker globally. This is a gain of 12% on the previous auction held at the end of October. The weak exchange rate of the Rand against the US$ - a loss of 4.5% - favoured the South African market, making local products more attractive. This in itself, however, was not the main reason for the spectacular performance. Renewed interest from both Europe as well as the Orient has caught processors on the wrong foot this late in the season. With South Africa the world leader in mohair production, it has caused concern for local processors that the temporary short supply may force them to down scale over this period. Frans Retief of Driehoeksfontein Boerdery in the Murraysburg district collected all the laurels this week. Not only did his clip, at R275.21/kg, set the highest average for the auction and season; he also achieved the highest individual price for a bale of winter kid mohair at R350.00/kg. Retief is the current holder of the world record for this type. The CMW Binning Department, where the high quality mohair of small-scale producers are combined, also succeeded in equaling the seasonal record of R350.00/kg.

The Industrial Development Corporation (IDC) of South Africa funds the development of competitive processed food, beverage, fibre, forestry and derivative industry that optimally utilises and develops local and regional resources to supply domestic demand and increase participation in international trade. - Maize
- Wheat and sugar

IDC encourages new or existing companies within the agro-processing and agriculture sector that plan to create new or expand industrial capacity within the economy to apply for funding. More information»
